Day One

1. Fill in the ages of the line of Shem on the chart in the space provided for each name.

Once you see the worksheet, print it out and study Genesis chapter eleven so you can fill in the names for each box and their ages at death. This gives you a picture of the ages of Noah and Shem's descendants in Genesis Chapter 11. It may surprise you to learn who was alive during Abram's time as well as some other interesting facts.

The numbers across the top and bottom of the chart represent the years since the creation of Adam. The grey boxes represent birth years and the black boxes represent a death years. They do NOT represent time in equal increments horizontally. Therefore, they cannot be compared for length of years by comparing the length of the lines to one another. What they DO represent is who was alive when others were alive at the same time.
